Holiday Turkey Voice:

Hellooo to all my Hampton Roads home chefs! (Gobble, gobble sfx) This is your holiday turkey talking, with an important message from ask HR Green dot org. First, I forgive you. I really don't mind that you roast me in the oven, sizzle me in your turkey fryer or whisk my giblets to make a rich, brown gravy. What I do mind, though, is what you do with all the grease that's left over! Putting fats, oils and grease down your household drain or garbage disposal can clog up your pipes. And don't even think about dumping the gunk in your yard. Ooooooh, that really wags my wattle!

My friends at ask HR green dot org say you should store your leftover cooking oils in a container with a lid, pop it in the freezer, then toss it out with the trash! If you're using a turkey fryer, re-use the oil for another time and when you're done, take it to your local oil collection center.

Now don't you feel good? No messy grease to clog your drain. No oily runoff from your yard to pollute our area waterways. (Gobble, gobble sfx) Don't be a turkey this holiday season, keep your drains fat-free!
